NOTES FOR USAGE

1. Different ISL signs for the same concept and object are labelled as sign 1, sign 2 and so on. Similarly, alternate explanations for a concept have been labelled as explanation 1, explanation 2, and so on, and alternate examples have been labelled as example 1, example 2, and so on.
2. For some words, instead of particular ISL signs, examples in ISL are given. For example, for the word fountain, the ISL sign can vary depending on the type of fountain and its visual perception. Therefore, for the word fountain, two examples in ISL labelled as example 1 and example 2 are given.
3. Similarly, one English (or Hindi) word can sometimes refer to different types of an object. In such cases, if the ISL signs are different for the different objects, the English word is repeated as a separate term and a brief explanation is given in brackets. For example, the English and Hindi words tongs and chimta can refer to the tongs used for making chapattis and the tongs used for holding hot vessels. The ISL signs for these two objects are different. Therefore, two separate videos have been made - chimta, tongs (chapatti, roti) and chimta, tongs (hot vessels) - and the words are listed individually in the word list.

4. Some English words may be repeated across different categories. This reflects the different meanings of the words. For example, the word chain is in the miscellaneous everyday items category as well the advanced vocabulary category. In the miscellaneous everyday items category, the word chain refers to the object and in the advanced category, the word chain refers to chain of events.
